LOVING, SERVING, AND ACCEPTING OF ALL PEOPLE
WITH GOD'S LIFE-CHANGING POWER AND GRACE

Pastor's Ponderings.....

A group of blind people encountered an elephant for the first time. Each touched a different part, a tusk, a leg, the trunk, and the tail. When the elephant wandered off, they each described their experience:

"An elephant is like a spear," said the man who touched the tusk. But others protested.

"No, an elephant is like a tree trunk!"

"No, it's like a boa constrictor!"

"No, it's like a rope!"

They argued and fought bitterly, becoming more deeply entrenched in their own perspective. Finally, a wise sage encouraged them to stop arguing and start listening. She taught them to listen carefully to one another. Only then could they understand that the elephant was magnificently more than any one of them could grasp from their own Limited perspective.

Each was genuinely correct; And each was wildly incorrect.

This ancient eastern parable teaches us that we can become passionately entrenched in our own righteousness, but this can lead us down a path of misinformation when we only listen to those who think like us. But listening to diverse perspectives gives us a more complete understanding. That kind of listening to understand may challenge our first assumptions. It can feel disconcerting, yet it leads us closer to what is real.

This is true in politics, families, friendships and church congregations. When we isolate ourselves from any information that might contradict preconceived opinions, we follow a path of willful ignorance. That kind of echo chamber may feel comfortable. It may even strengthen our belief in the veracity of our own opinions. After all, "people are saying..." The solution is to shut down gossip and communicate clearly.

Some avoid direct communication from the feeling that conflict is bad. I believe that conflict itself is neither good nor bad. Conflict is merely an indicator that something needs to change. Our world is changing fast, so is inevitable. What we do with that conflict could lead to horrible destruction. It could also lead to tremendous growth. It all depends on how we communicate.

Conflict can lead us to ask questions, delve deeper into a conversation, and really understand another perspective, another part of the elephant. If we don't take the time to communicate with each other effectively, we will be overwhelmed by conflict.

In Matthew 18:15, Jesus gives us a step-by-step plan to resolve conflicts. The first step is the most important one: "If a fellow believer hurts you, go and talk to them —work it out between the two of you." I am a strong believer in this. I have seen it work miracles. I've shared some of them with you. I have seen Matthew 18:15 bring healing, reconciliation and growth.

Did you ever meet someone who began a conversation by ending the conversation? "No, I don't want to talk to you." Effectively, they are saying, "My perspective is the only one that counts. Don't confuse me with your perspective." They shut themselves down from hearing any voice that could have helped them understand better. This creates a simpler, comforting version of reality, but one that's less likely to be complete. Consider the parable of the elephant.

By communicating clearly and listening to one another with a sincere desire to understand and resolve conflicts, we become a stronger community. The humble disciple listens.

Because this is so pivotal to communal life, our congregation has opened several channels to encourage healthy communication. One of these is the Pastoral Relations Ministry (PRM – also known as PRC). The other is the Human Resources Ministry (HRM).

If you have any concern about pastoral care, the PRM is a cordial, discreet setting to share what is on your mind, be heard, and engage in dialogue toward resolution of your concerns. Please visit <https://brecksvilleucc.org/wp-content/uploads/2024/03/asf.pdf> for more information. The PRM is a "best practice" for congregations, recommended by the UCC national offices.

If you have any concerns about a church employee, including the pastor, that are not related to pastoral care, the HRM is the best setting.

We are all learning. But just because I'm the one in the pulpit doesn't mean it's a one way conversation. Some of the most important lessons I've learned have come through lapses of judgement and constructive criticism. I would love to sit down with you, listen, learn and grow.

Church growth is all about communication. Let's practice healthy communication. Let us speak our truth and listen to one another with clarity, integrity, openness and, above all, kindness.
